LEADERSHIP and STUFF...

Milam County, more specifically Cameron, keep getting a report on the young people who go out into this fantasia of a changing world.

We mention a few:

MONTY HUMBLE -- named a Junior Fellow in the Arts & Science School of University of Texas, Austin, a high academic honor.

WAYNE FISHER -- elected president of the Houston Trial Lawyers Association.

TIM TITSWORTH -- included in only 470 members of Future Farmers of America receiving the American Farmer Degree.

MELVIN HOLLAS -- received the Santa Fe 4-H Scholarship, the top 4-H award in Texas.

ROBERT MANN -- named assistant city editor, one of the only three, at the Dallas Times-Herald. He is former night city editor of Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

JAMES HOLLAS -- began work on revamping format of the Corpus Christi Caller-Times, where he is a copy editor.

This says something about the kind of people we have in Cameron, in all kinds of fields, the young men they produce and educate around here, and the motivation they sustain in quite competitive fields across the state and nation.

They obviously have the stuff of leadership as well as the mentality to handle their special fields. What is that stuff they may have in common?

Chances are one reason is they came from a small city where people are still people, not sub-divided and categorized by job, age and humor. It is true that 7 out of 10 corporate executives a few years ago came from non-metro areas, either small towns or the country.

Since there is no country as such, anymore, they come from non-metro areas, a blend of agri-business-city-small town.

The diversity of these young men in personality, background and interest is broad. But they find their way. And you can bet it has not been easy.

The real stuff they have is motivation, and quite likely, a broad view of things among those of their age, education and background.

Anyone who might resent their success would not envy what is required to meet the standards these various fields demand at their functioning level.

What is a leader? Who knows? He is the one who gets there first or finds out something first or who stands alone to be proven right or who takes responsibility beyond the mediocre to excellence. Or who dares!

You can bet these young men, the oldest only 16 years out of Yoe High School, and the youngest still a student there, have done all of these things.

Area Roundup

Mrs. Alfaro Passes Test

HEARNE

Sheriff E. P. Elliott said he accompanied Mrs. Joe Alfaro to Waco on Tuesday of last week where she voluntarily submitted to a polygraph test in the death of her husband on October 12. Elliott said the results of the test were negative. Alfaro was found dead at his home near Mumford at 1 a.m., October 12.

Townhouse Apartments Due

TEMPLE

Plans to build 120 townhouse apartments in Temple for middle income families won approval of the Central Texas Council of Government directors. The $1,853,020 project will be built on a nine acre tract in the northwest corner of Loop 363 and 5th Street. Contemporary Properties of Dallas proposed the development and has requested a $1,667,718 loan from the Housing and Urban Development Dept. for construction.

Announcement Starts Stampede

GEORGETOWN

On the light side, Don Scarbrough, writing in his column in the Williamson County Sun, told this story: "Most dramatic announcement I have heard this year came in the fourth quarter of a JV game here, early in the season. From the loudspeaker: 'We have only eight hotdogs left.' Two hundred people leaped to their feet and made a mad dash for the stand."

Merger Meets Objections

BELTON

A proposal to merge the Central Texas and Heart of Texas Councils of Governments and the Waco-based Economic Development District for this area drew stiff opposition from CTCOG officials during a meeting at city hall. The proposal cropped up in tentative policies of the Division of Planning Coordination under Gov. Preston Smith, with a deadline for the merger of August 31, 1972. The meeting was to be a pre-application conference before CTCOG made application for a $45,000 planning grant.

Highway Proposals Studied

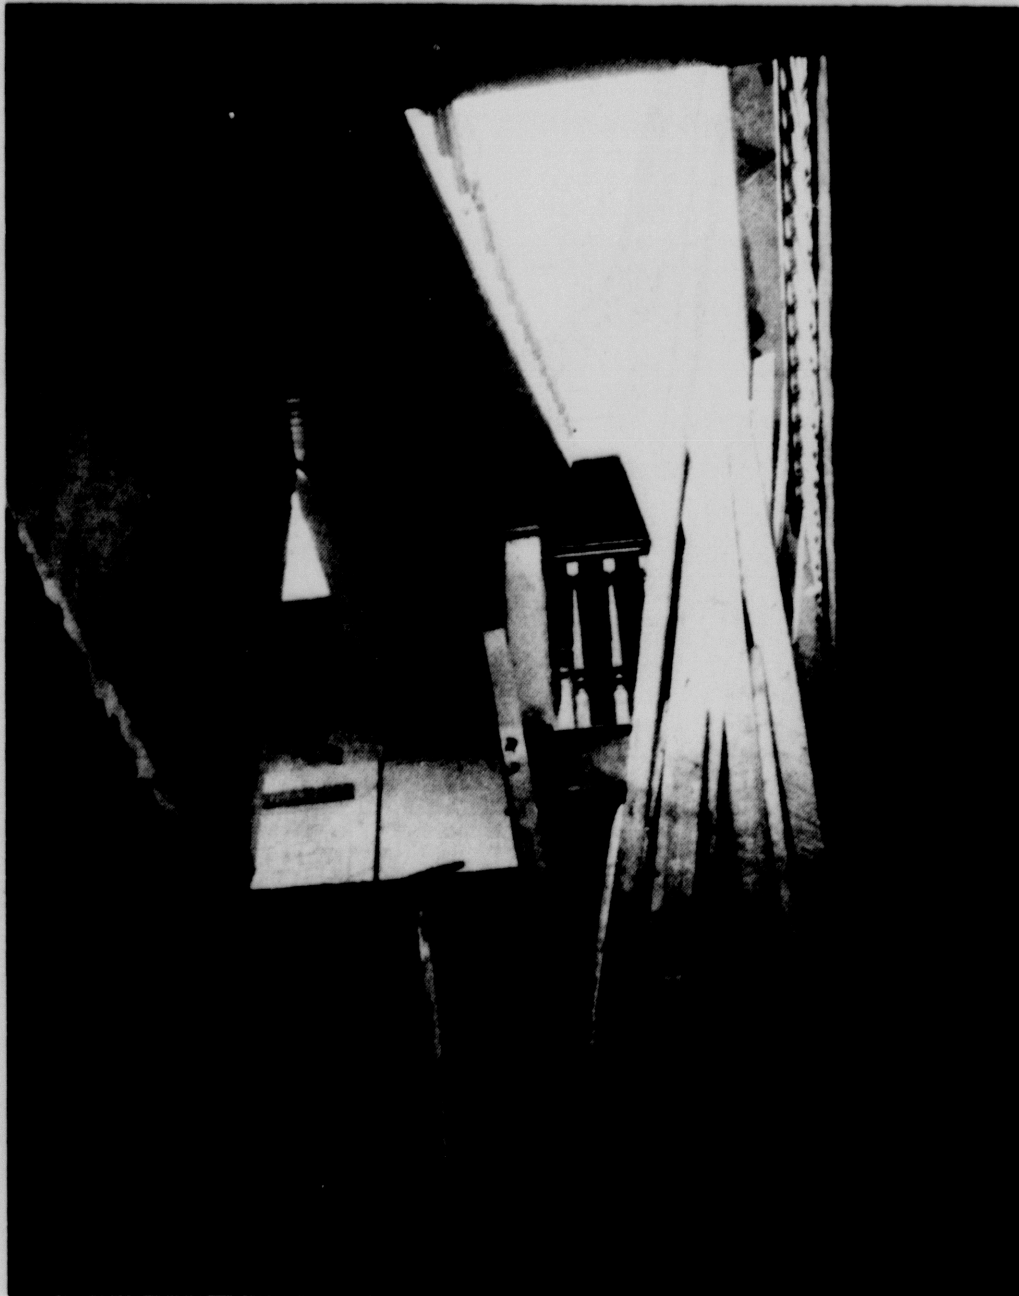

ROSEBUD

Three proposals for rebuilding State Highway 53, between Rosebud and Temple, await final decision of the State Highway Dept. following a meeting of state, county and city officials in Rosebud Thursday. Most of the 72 area residents attending the meeting favored use of the present Highway 53 route with surface improvements and elimination of two bad curves. Other proposals call for a new route from Rosebud to the intersection of Highway 53 to a new road that would intersect Highway 77 a mile north of Rosebud.

Wash Pot Stew Served

SOMERVILLE

The annual gem stew was held at the First Baptist Church, a tradition since 1924. Two large wash pots owned by the church are used to make a chicken stew and beef stew. The event was held on the church lawn, with crackers, coffee, iced tea and donuts on the side.

DAYLIGHT STREAMS down flights of stairs at the old Auditorium Hotel on the corner of First and Central as workmen dismantle floors, walls, and ceilings, continuing demolition in the urban renewal area.

Waco Physician On Outreach Staff

County Judge O. B. Harden has announced the appointment of Dr. Zelig M. Josephs of Waco as consultant to the Milam County Mental Health Outreach Clinic.

Dr. Josephs, chief of the Mental Hygiene Clinic - Day Treatment Center at the Veterans Administration Hospital in Waco, will have office hours in Cameron on Wednesday afternoons.

Bascom Hodges, representative of the Austin State Hospital, met with Dr. Josephs, the Outreach Clinic staff, and advisors last week to outline responsibilities of the clinic.

Services Held For Hightower

Aubrey Hightower, 60, of 705 N. Milam St., died of an apparent heart attack Friday afternoon near Temple while he and his wife were enroute to visit a daughter in Oklahoma. He was a farmer and rancher and a native of the Walker's Creek Community.

Funeral was at 2 p.m. Sunday October 31 in the Green Funeral Home chapel. Burial was in Walker's Creek Cemetery.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Cora Mae Hightower of Cameron, two daughters, Mrs. Peggy Dyer of Cameron and Mrs. Patti Kay Waters of Lawton, Oklahoma; his mother, Mrs. Tom Hightower of Cameron; a brother, Harley Hightower of Theodore, Ala.; and two grandchildren.

"Our first priority will be patients who have been in the State Hospital and are now receiving medication," Hodges said. "As time is available we will consult with others who request our service."

Hodges said a similar program in Brazos County reduced admitants to the State Hospital by 30 percent last year.

The Outreach Clinic, staffed by Mrs. W. C. Wallace and Mrs. Nona Miller, is temporarily located at the County Health Unit, 209 South Houston, Cameron. It is an extension of the Central Brazos Valley Psychiatric Division of the Austin State Hospital.

Buckholts Sets Homecoming

Buckholts High School will hold its annual Homecoming festivities Saturday, November 6.

The activities include a turkey and dressing dinner in the school cafeteria Saturday from four to six p.m. Tickets for the dinner are $1.00 for students and $1.50 for adults.

The 1971 Buckholts Homecoming Queen will be presented prior to the Saturday night game between the Buckholts Badgers and the Oglesby Tigers at 7:30.

Homecoming queen candidates are Marcia Barkemeyer and Becky Beckhusen, seniors, and Jo Ann Beckhusen and Linda Marek, juniors.

Rural Loans Boost Home Construction

Home construction in Milam County should show another jump this year with announcement of a 30 percent increase in available Farmers Home Administration loan funds. The local FHA office currently has about 80 new home loan applications in process for Cameron and Milam County.

Henry Ivey, FHA agency supervisor, said that $643,350 was channeled into Milam County through rural housing loans for the fiscal year that ended June 30. Loans for the previous year totaled $415,960.

"As of July 1 we had completed 67 loans for new home or apartment construction in Milam County," Ivey said. He said this included 6 homes either completed or under construction, one major remodeling and two purchases of existing homes in the Cameron city limits.

Cameron became eligible for FHA financing following the 1970 census which showed a population under the 5,500 FHA rural loan limit. "We have already approved between $130,000 and $140,000 in home loans in the City of Cameron," Ivey said.

He said 14 different contracting firms worked on home construction financed by FHA loans in Milam County last year.

"At present contractors are as much as two months behind in starting homes," Ivey said, noting that this was an indication of the boom in construction here.

Ivey said that a least half of the loans this year will be channeled to "low" income families, less than $6,000 adjusted annual income. He explained that adjusted income was the annual fixed income less deductions for the number of dependents. Maximum loan is between $17,000 and $18,000, but Ivey said this depended on the family income.

Farmers Home, a Department of Agriculture agency, supplements credit available in towns of up to 5,500 population and the rural countryside. Ivey said the rural housing program is "one of the main channels pouring private capital into rural community progress."

"The increases in available funds that we are receiving is because of a current awareness that rural areas must have adequate housing," Ivey said.

Humble Named UT Jr. Fellow

Monty Humble, son of Mr. and Mrs. Don Humble of Cameron, has been selected a Junior Fellow of the College of Arts and Sciences of the University of Texas. He was a 1970 graduate of Yoe High School and valedictorian of his class.

David Kendrick, director of the Junior Fellows Program at University of Texas, said those selected for the honor "are of the highest academic rank and are among the liveliest, most thoughtful and penetrating of our undergraduates." He said the appointment is one of the most distinguished honors an undergraduate can receive.

On Diphtheria...

Positive Reports Few

There have been no new positive reports of diphtheria cases following tests made on contacts and families of those with positive findings, according to Dr. C. G. Swift, Milam County health unit director.

A total of six positive tests have been reported, with four in the second grade and two at Ada Henderson School.

Dr. Swift said the children are being treated by family physicians, and quarantines are being observed.

Immediate contacts of the cases and family members have been tested, he added.

The only active case of diphtheria reported was that of a brother of Ricky Borgas, 9 year old boy who died of the disease October 19. The boy is a student at junior high school. Tests were made of other students at the school.

The Milam County Health Unit administered over 3,500 doses of the diphtheria vaccine to adults and children in Cameron.

A fund has been started for the Borgas family for meeting medical expenses on Ricky, his brother, and an infant born October 20 who was kept in the hospital. Donations may be made to the Borgas fund at either Citizens National or First National Bank.

In Rockdale, the school board has ruled that "those students who have not produced evidence of immunization for diphtheria by Nov. 3 will be excluded from school until written proof of immunization is obtained from a clinic or physician."

Mrs. Mary Cook school nurse, said that there is no "diphtheria scare" in Rockdale and that the action is strictly precautionary. She said "we have 90 to 95 percent immunization in the local schools."

Another action by the school board rules that "for the duration of the presence of diphtheria in Milam County, all students with temperatures of over 100 degrees and with sore throats will be excluded from school until diagnosed and treated by a qualified physician."

Cedars Of Lebanon Carry Ancient Legend

By Ibrahim Noori
Reuter Correspondent

BEIRUT, Lebanon

A woman who once used the red-colored twigs from a cedar of Lebanon as firewood saw the milk she was boiling turn the color of blood, according to a local legend in Lebanon.

The moral of the tale -- that divine retribution awaits those who abuse the sacred tree -- has done little to deter generations of men from destroying the cedars, which covered this country in ancient times.

Few remain today.

The stately cedars of Lebanon were praised in the Bible and were famous among ancient peoples. The tree was often mentioned in the scriptures as a symbol of power, prosperity and longevity.

Solomon used its wood to build his temple and a palace in Jerusalem. The palace was called "The House of the Forest of Lebanon."

The Lebanese government is now trying to put right the exploitation of the ages, encouraging the planting of thousands of cedar saplings in various parts of the country. The cedars most revered here, particularly by the country's Maronite Christians, are those that stand on Mount Lebanon at Becharre, 75 miles north of Beirut.

In former times a thick forest covered the mountainous area. Now only 400 cedars stand within a wall-enclosed enclosure built in the 19th century by Britain's Queen Victoria to protect the trees from goats.

A major tourist attraction, some of the trees are 1,200 and 2,000 years old, with trunks up to 40 feet in circumference.

The cedar, which gave Lebanon the motif for its national flag, is now protected by the state. Logging is permitted with a special license given only when cutting is necessary to maintain the health of the remaining trees.

At Becharre, armed forest guards constantly patrol to protect the remaining trees from vandals. No building has been allowed within the protective wall, except for a tiny Maronite chapel built there in 1843.

Cedars also remain at Barouk, further south. There the government began planting additional saplings in into a national park, according to Dr. Malek Basbous of the agriculture ministry.

It is very different from the past. The Phoenicians exploited the trees 3,000 years ago when they exported the wood to Egypt to help build the palaces of the Pharaohs.

The trees, valued for shipbuilding fell to the axes of Greeks, Romans and the Crusaders.

The destruction continued during centuries of Turkish rule. During World War I the Turks used the cedars to fuel wood-burning railway engines.

In World War II, Allied forces used the trees to build the railroad from Palestine to Syria along the Lebanese coast, according to a Lebanese agriculture ministry official.

Quick and adequate response by Milam Health Unit professionals may well have contained an epidemic of diphtheria.

It happened in recent years in the San Antonio area. Texas Health Department officials took immediate concern into the Cameron area problem. Thousands of shots or boosters were administered here. Communications media gave coverage that encouraged response, but not panic.

Dr. C. G. Swift, unit director, said diphtheria vaccine was at first difficult to obtain when the need for broad inoculation developed, following one death, isolation and

Was Vice-President Spiro Agnew officially authorized to give assurances to the Army-backed Greek dictatorship that the Nixon administration would override any congressional ban on military aid to Greece? Or was he acting in the exuberance of the moment at finding himself feted as a favorite son returning to the land of his ancestors?

The Pentagon may have valid reasons for considering arms aid to Greece to be essential for NATO defenses in the eastern Mediterranean. If this is so, then President Nixon might be justified in overriding the amendment cutting off this aid, already voted by treatment of four more and observation of a few others by Cameron medical people.

A steady flow of students, adults, infants went through the health unit early last week.

If we are to live a better life, the qualitative life, we first must live beyond some state of survival.

Grasping the unexpected and responding with precision and coherence is the order of the modern, Milam County day.

The conduct of state and county health leaders and cooperation of area residents are additional signs that we are cohesive people amidst the potential of disaster.

Editor's Note: This special series of articles features some of the mental health aspects of nursing homes — information that is of interest to everyone, but is of special importance to those individuals and their families who are considering and choosing a nursing home.

Mental health plays an important role in the lives of those in nursing homes and of their families and friends; and the mental state of a person and his family who are considering a nursing home is a most significant factor.

This is so because mental attitudes and the approach of the family and the individual to the nursing home can mean a great deal for the future happiness of both the person going into the home and his family.

Knowing some of the key things about life in nursing homes is, therefore, essential to developing the positive kind of outlook that can make the difference between happy stay in a home — and one of utter misery.

For example, the key figure in the lives of most residents of a nursing home is the administrator. He sets the emotional tone of their care and their surroundings.

Even the way the administrator looks and acts is a kind of model for the staff and is an influence upon the residents, too. If the administrator is cordial and helpful, the staff will tend to be the same. The residents will also reflect his cheerfulness and helpfulness.

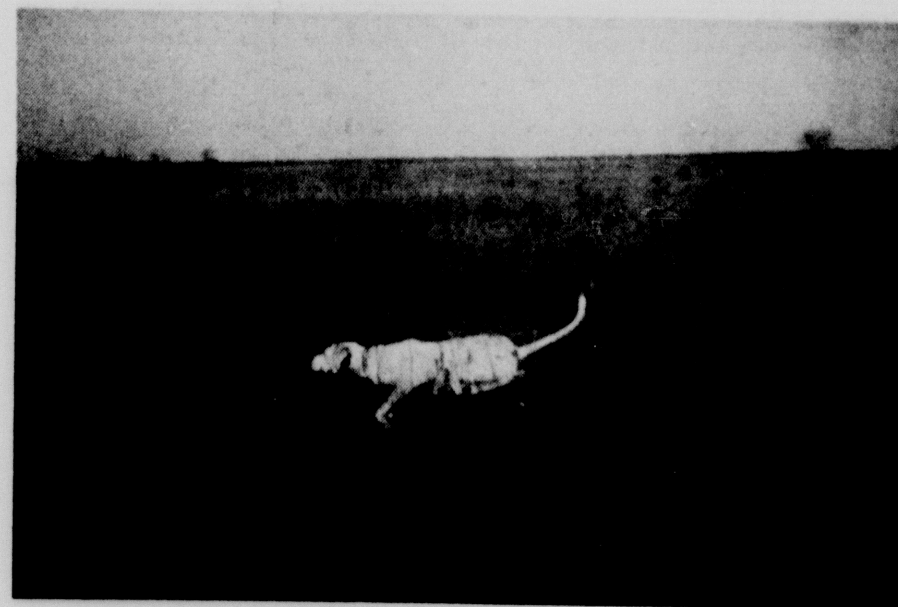

Like the staff, the furnishings and decorations of a nursing home mirror the administrator's principles and practices of resident care. What the residents need are surroundings that are both stimulating and homelike.

Pictures are appropriate, and residents are more likely to feel most at ease with the kind of landscapes, domestic scenes, and flower pictures with which they have been familiar all their lives. Likewise, insofar as possible, they might be provided with the comfortable, homey kind of furniture they have always had.

Many, for example, welcome a rocking chair like an old friend. A clock, calendar, telephone, mail box, and the like help residents to keep in touch with the realities of time and the outside world.

If the administrator works along lines like these for his residents, chances are that the nursing home will be one in which living becomes a positive and pleasant experience for the resident.

MADRID
Spain's best-known literary masterpiece, Miguel de Cervantes' "Don Quixote," is undergoing yet another translation -- this time as a comic book.

Although it has not yet gone on sale, the proposed series of 12 comics has created an uproar among more traditional Spaniards who regard the starry eyed Quixote as a national hero.

The Cervantes classic first printed on the presses of Madrid's Juan de la Cuesta in 1605, was once described by British novelist Somerset Maugham as one of history's 10 best novels.

The comic book project is the idea of Madrid artists Antonio Albarran and Juan Sarompas, who with the help of a small staff have done more than 20,000 drawings in the preparation of the first three editions of "El Quixote Comics."

Samples of the drawings have appeared in the Madrid press much to the distress of many lovers of the book.

The hapless knight errant himself is depicted as an angry eyed warrior rather than the gentle bumbler of whom Cervantes wrote in his book.

Sancro Panza, the heros' faithful companion, seems more like a revolutionary than the long-suffering counterfoil to Quixote's inspired madness.

But perhaps the unkindest cut of all concerns Quixote's legendary horse, Rocinante, described by Cervantes as a spavined nag that did not know where its next step was coming from. The comic depicts the horse as a fire-breathing charger.

A sacrilege?

"Of course there are those who feel that way," says artist Albarran, "but that doesn't matter. We think this is an excellent way of getting this great work read, especially abroad."

Although there are no plans at present to publish the comic books outside Spain, Albarran says publishers in Japan, England, the Soviet Union and the United States are interested.

Albarran and Sarompas insists that their motives are more literary than financial.

Comic books do not sell as well in Spain as in some other countries, they say, primarily because of their tradition of sex, violence and lack of originality.

"But I don't think this will be the case with 'Don Quixote,'" Albarran says.

X-Rays Show Jeweled Mummy

By Sylvan Silver
 Reuter Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, Pa. A Philadelphia woman, Mrs. James E. Bohlke, went treasure-hunting recently inside the skull of a 3,000-year-old Egyptian priest at the Academy of Natural Sciences here.

The search, with x-rays, conducted by Mrs. Bohlke, a technician at the academy, disclosed two suspicious objects behind the mummy's teeth that could possibly be scarabs: Egyptian beetles or replicas carved of clay, stone or precious stones and buried with the dead.

The dark, chocolate-hued mummy of a priest of Hor-Amun -- god of the sky, Horus, and god of Thebes, Amun -- has been the property of the academy for more than 40 years.

It was quite common, according to Mrs. Bohlke, to bury Egyptian mummies with jewels and precious metals, often secreted in the groin and hand area, or in the skull.

The priest, who died around 1,000 B.C., and has rested relatively undisturbed in a glass case in the first-floor exhibition room, was apparently never checked for jewels until this week, spokesmen at the academy said.

This week was a convenient time for the investigation, according to academy officials, because the mummy is being prepared for a prominent place in the exhibit of life from death -- natural recycling, the reuse of natural materials.

The mummy illustrates how man cheats earth by preserving organic tissues for thousands of years in unrecyclable form, according to academy officials.

World Community Day To Feature Former Missionary

Cameron Church Women United will celebrate World Community Day on Friday November 5 at 1 p.m. at the Methodist Fellowship Hall joining with church women in more than 5000 other communities across the nation.

Special guest and speaker for the program will be Mrs. Helen Scott Saulsbury of Temple who will speak from her experiences in mission work to India and Pakistan.

The 1971 emphasis will be on the deterioration of the environment which has become one of the most important problems facing mankind today. In facing the realities which this crisis presents, women of all churches are invited to participate in a united service on the theme "Build a New Earth!"

World Community Day is more than just one day of special emphasis for church women.

Church Women United has always responded generously to material aid programs for refugees, victims of disaster, and other needy people, in cooperation with Church World Service. This takes place all through the year, but it receives special emphasis on World Community Day.

Church Women United participates in the Clothing Appeal of Church World Service and in the sale of Gift Certificates. In 1971 funds obtained from the sale of $3 Gift Certificates will be used as follows:

Blankets will be sent to disaster areas (part of the 1970 funds were responsible for the first blankets to reach Peru).

School supplies to be distributed to developing nations.

Tools and materials for home-building in poverty areas in our own country.

Certificates marked "where most needed" provide funds for a variety of purposes such as nutrition, family service centers, self-help projects and any sudden emergencies. Offerings received from the church service will go toward Intercontinental Mission, which serves people's needs in this country and abroad.

In keeping with the ecological theme those who attend are asked to pick up and bring along to the meeting any trash, cans, bottles and litter that they see as they come to the church. This is to emphasize that everyone can all do something to clean up the environment.

New Ticket Rate In Effect For Temple Theatre

The Temple Civic Theatre announces the establishment of a student group rate. The rate will apply to groups of ten or more students when tickets are purchased in advance by one person.

The student group rate is $1.50 per ticket instead of the usual $2.50 per ticket. The group rate is good for all performances except opening and closing nights of a production.

The Theatre's next production is "Black Comedy," a farce by Peter Shaffer. Production dates are Novm. 5, 6, 11, 12, and 13. The theatre box office is open from 5-8 p.m. beginning Monday, Nov. 1. Call 778-4751 for reservations.

"Black Comedy" opened in New York in February 1967 and ran for a successful ten months with a cast led by Michael Crawford, Lynn Redgrave and Geraldine Page.

Rick Donner, Miss Debbie Gideon and Mrs. Wallace Ferguson spotlight the cast that will romp through a crazy carnival of darkness.

Quick Chick Scallopine:

It takes just 20 minutes to cook a succulent dish of Chicken Scallopine using the juicy meat of boned chicken thighs. They're a snap to bone, says the National Broiler Council. Just slash the meat the length of the bone, scrape it away and remove the meat in one chunk. Pound it flat to make a uniform cutlet that sautes to perfection in only a few minutes, flavored with lemon and herbs.

Chicken Scallopine

8 broiler-fryer chicken thighs, boned
 1 1/2 teaspoon salt
 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 2 tablespoons chopped parsley
 1 tablespoon chopped chives
 1/4 teaspoon dried leaf marjoram

To bone chicken thighs, cut along thinner side of thigh to the bone, slashing thigh the length of the bone. Holding one end of the bone, scrape the meat away until bone is free. Cut off rounded piece of cartilage. Place boned thighs between 2 pieces of foil; pound with side of cleaver or rolling pin to flatten. Sprinkle with salt. Melt butter over medium heat in large skillet. Add chicken, skin side down. Cook about 10 minutes, until lightly browned. Turn; sprinkle with lemon juice and herbs. Cook about 10 minutes, until tender. Serve on buttered toast points; garnish with thin lemon slices. YIELD: 4 servings.

Dutch Organist To Have Recital

GEORGETOWN Wim van der Panne of The Netherlands, organist, will be presented in a recital on Wednesday, November 10, at 8 p.m. in Lois Perkins Chapel at Southwestern University. The public is invited to hear this outstanding artist.

The program includes the works of Andre Raison, Francois Couperin, Johann S. Bach, Johann Peter Kellner, Franz Liszt, Marius Monnikendam, Jean Langlais, and Cesar Auguste Franck.

College Notes

John Ben Sutter, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Sutter of Cameron is a member of the 1971-72 Golden Wave Band at Baylor University. A freshman at Baylor, Sutter is one of 150 members composing the marching band.

The band, which lives up to its name by appearing in bright gold-colored uniforms, will present special half-time shows at all Baylor home football games and at several home basketball games this year.

Dorsdet Eskimos Produce Unique Art

By David White
Reuter Correspondent

CAPE DORSET

Now that the summer slack is over, the 650 inhabitants of this northern township are working on their principal export -- art for the culture-hungry cities of the south.

Cape Dorset, on the west of Baffin Island facing the Hudson Strait, has no television, paved roads or parking problems.

It is served by a De Havilland Twin Otter aircraft, which flies in three times a week in good weather. This year's count of tourists has been a record -- at 50.

But many art collectors from Toronto to London and Japan can produce names of people who live here -- Kenojuak, Kiakshuk, Lucy, Pauta, Anna and the other painters, carvers and printers who work in the blue and yellow shacks of the west Baffin Eskimo co-op.

The Northwest Territories government started moving Eskimos into the settlement in 1958. Though the Hudson's Bay Company and the church flourished at Cape Dorset 30 years before.

James Houston, the first area administrator, had come first as an artist, and the co-operative was formed at his initiative. Adapting techniques used to decorate clothing, the Eskimos learned to carve their drawn designs on soapstone slabs for printing.

The same motifs recur -- stylized hunting scenes, the apparitional birds, fantasies of men and ice, seals, fish, walrus, caribou, dogs and enchanted owls.

Each original drawing is paid for and kept by the co-operative, but only one or two per cent is considered good enough for printing. The batches of prints -- limited to 50 copies -- go straight to the southern market, where prices start at around $80 for a black-and-white print.

Under the auspices of Ottawa designer Helga Palko the co-op is also branching out into metal jewelry, which may be ready for the market next spring.

Helga Palko, like the other organizers, continues to be impressed by the gifts and enthusiasms she finds.

Eskimos' enthusiasm for the civilization of the white man is not universal. In the main Baffin settlement at Frobisher Bay, most Eskimos are out of work and live off welfare, tied there because they have lost the skills of hunting.

Cape Dorset has its problems, too. Many young people are known to inhale or drink hair-spray as a cheap drug. The co-op cannot employ everybody.

But art is the settlement economic independence -- the co-op paid its first dividend last year -- and the artistic director, Terrence Ryan, remains the community's leading figure.

The present area administrator is an Englishman, Richard Sparham. In the 10 years he has been in Cape Dorset, the population of Baffin Island has doubled to around 5,000. The Eskimo community, decimated by tuberculosis and influenza in the last century, is expanding probably as fast as any in the world.

Last year's registration figures for Cape Dorset show 31 births and four deaths. Building, dependent on shipped materials, cannot keep up. Each bedroom houses an average two to three people.

Sparham sees his job as helping the Eskimos develop in such a way as to be able to choose a way of life for themselves. "They've never had a chance to decide their future," he says.

With a strange civilization thrust upon them too quickly, Eskimos have had little opportunity to consider what they are accepting or rejecting.

Nobody is certain about the future. Further north, prospectors search for oil and minerals. In Cape Dorset, the Eskimos' art meets a growing demand, but as Dorothy Eber, a researcher from Montreal, puts it, "It's a pretty shaky economic base."

Miss Eber, on her third visit to the settlement, is busy recording interviews with the older Eskimos, charting out their history, relationships and ways of thought.

'The Lonely Road Back' Is Modern Religious Novel

WACO

"Young people aren't going to buy these legalistic principles," he said.

Organized religion has implied, even dictated, that the way to God through Christ is the same with every person, he said. But to say that everyone has to understand God the same way is to deny "individualism."

In his book, Moser deals with these ideas by using everyday people and circumstances. Although the book has a type of religious theme, Moser said readers should expect it to deal with many contemporary themes of modern life. The book is not the "typical" religious novel; it deals with problems common to people involved in life's quandaries.

QANTAS FLIGHT

Sydney, Australia. Reuter - The first Boeing 747 jumbo jet flight by Australia's Qantas International Airline will cross the Pacific from Sydney to San Francisco September 3, the airline has announced here.

A novel, "The Lonely Road Back," by Dr. Leslie Moser, professor of psychology at Baylor University, has been published by Word Books of Waco.

The book, set against a backdrop of the exciting world of professional football, deals with a young quarterback in his struggle to find meaning for his life.

Moser, who has written several books, said, "Religion can be equated with championing the dignity of man." He explained that one theme in the novel is "God is personal with every individual; He comes to people in different ways."

Another theme that Moser employs is that the world of organized religion and the church have adopted a stance that is actually driving young people away from it.

BUSINESS REVIEW

I.T. Gilbert Is A Top Salesman For Mutual Of Omaha

You win the Master Builders Club award by top salesmanship and service with Mutual of Omaha.

That is just what Ivey T. Gilbert, Milam County representative of the famous insurance company, delivers.

He is one of Mutual of Omaha's top 12 salesmen in the country, cited January, 1970, as a member of the Master Builders Club of Mutual of Omaha Insurance and its affiliate, United Benefit Life Insurance Company.

He won similar recognition in a plaque presented in January, 1968.

Gilbert is a sales and service representative for Milam County, a responsibility he has held for five years. He has a total of 13 years experience in the insurance sales field.

Four times a year he joins with other representatives of Mutual of Omaha in study course and seminars to update information on today's service needs for both companies and what other companies are offering.

So Gilbert's presentation is timely. And a Mutual of Omaha policy pays and pays and pays, because, he points out of one clause.

It is a reoccurrence clause no other health and accident company provides which can be used over and over and over for the same disability.

Gilbert cites on policyholder's experience in which the man received $15,000 for one disability for recurring health problems due to the one deficiency.

Born in Buckholts, Gilbert graduated from Sharp High School before it was consolidated about 15 years ago. He is married, and he and his wife Pat have three children: Ronald, 16; Brenda, 13; and Donna, 10. The Gilberts live on West 22nd Street

Beer Drinkers Decrease Exports

By Colin McIntyre
Reuter Correspondent

PILSEN
In this Bohemian town where beer has been brewed for 700 years, it is said that people drink two beers a day -- the first and the last.

However, Czechoslovaks' understandable partiality for their beer poses major problems for the state-controlled brewing industry, which is expanding production energetically in order to increase exports.

As a brewing official lamented -- not without a touch of pride -- "Most of the extra production is being taken up by Czechoslovaks, who are getting thirstier every day."

Statistics seem to bear him out. At present Czechoslovakia ranks second only to Belgium in annual per capita consumption. The average for the whole population, including new-born infants, is 29 gallons compared to Belgium's 30 gallons.

But, if one excludes predominantly wine-drinking Slovakia from this, Bohemia leads the world with 33 gallons, while the Pilsen area registers the awe-inspiring figure of 50 gallons. Before World War II the Czechoslovak figure was a modest 17.5 gallons.

At present, Bohemia's eight major breweries produce a yearly flood of 352,110,000 gallons of beer of varying degrees of potency, of which only about 22 million gallons manage to get abroad.

Pilsen and the almost equally famous Budvar (Budweiser) beer to mostly to the west, particularly West Germany, while Prague's Smichov beer is exported widely within the eastern bloc. In addition, Czechoslovakia exports brewer's malt and hops to all parts of the world, including Japan, Latin America, Switzerland and Western Germany.

Bohemians have always been exceptionally fussy about their beer. In the middle ages, Pilsentown councillors would make regular spot checks on brewers to test the quality of the brew.

The test was simple but effective. A sample was poured on a solid oak bench, allowed to dry, then solemnly sat on by a number of local worthies in leather trousers. If they stuck, it was good brew. If the bench came up with them as they stood, it was a fantastic one.

Those unfortunates who flunked the test were put in the stocks with a jagged metal collar around their necks and beaten with a silver embossed leather club.

Until the last century hereditary brewing rights were enjoyed by individual houses in Pilsen and were passed on to the heirs or the new owner of the house if it were sold.

If the owner wanted to rebuild his house or tear it down for a new one, he was obliged, if he wanted to keep his brewing rights, to retain something of the original in the new. It was usually the portal.

In 1842 the brewing houses in Pilsen banded together and founded the Pilsner Brewery, which has produced the beer bearing its name ever since, despite severe bomb damage during World War II.

The brewery now has a curious blend of traditional techniques, which the brewers have refused to change for fear of altering the beer's incomparable flavor, and modern technology in the auxiliary processes.

Asian Nations Fight Drug Use

By Roland Dallas
Reuter Correspondent

HONG KONG
Southeast Asian nations under strong American urging are mounting new offensives against drug dealing.

The aim is to cut back supplies of heroin to the U.S. to U.S. troops in South Vietnam and to the growing number of young Asian heroin addicts.

Under an aid agreement with the U.S., Turkey will stop producing the opium poppy -- from which heroin is made -- next year and narcotics experts in Hong Kong expect that the focus of drug smuggling will then switch to southeast Asia.

The major source of supply would be the so-called "golden triangle" at the meeting of the frontiers of Laos, Thailand and Burma, the experts believe.

According to American estimates about half of the world's illicit output of opium comes from this area and most of it is funneled through Bangkok to Hong Kong, Saigon and the U.S.

American servicemen in South Vietnam has been a prime customer for dealers, but under a program of troop withdrawals the number of U.S. troops there is scheduled to be down to 185,000 by the end of this year -- compared with a peak of 534,000 by the end of this year -- compared with a peak of 534,420 in April, 1969.

"As we reduce our presence in Vietnam... heroin traffickers will undoubtedly seek new customers for their drugs," U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Marshall Green has said in Washington.

Poage Says School System Faces Federal Control

"Very few of us realize how fast our school system is moving into the control of the Federal government," Cong. W. R. Poage commented in his October 22 newsletter.

"Many people think that this is a good thing but there are many others who feel it is extremely dangerous," he continued.

He said those who think Federal control is the answer to all troubles should observe the postal service in the U.S.

"In the old days of the Post Office Department, there was a definite political connection," he noted. "The Congressmen had to accept some responsibility for the quality of the service and hence he had a real incentive to try and see that we got the best postmasters and carriers possible."

Poage said the political influence has gradually diminished and last year the United Postal Service was formed "which immediately raised postal rates by about one-third."

To make matters worse, Poage said, the "Service" immediately reduced the quantity and quality of mail service.

"I think most everybody recognizes that we are paying more and getting less," he said, "but very few recognize that that same legislation, which you will recall I opposed, authorized the 'Postal Service' to sell $40 billion worth of bonds guaranteed by the United States government. That simply adds to the public debt."

All this is the fault of the administration in Washington, Poage said, "not your local postal employees. In our country they are still doing a good job, but they can't deliver mail which is being hauled from Waco to Denver on its way to St. Louis."

"I fear that if we are going to turn our schools over to the federal government we may be laying the foundation for another debacle of this kind."

The Wage-Price Freeze

Q - My health insurance program at work is having its annual "open season." It's only at this time that an employee can increase his benefits or change programs. Is this considered a fringe benefit prohibited by the freeze?

A - No. The fringe benefit prohibition does not apply to those benefit programs that, according to established practice, require an employee to exercise his right to join a program or to increase his benefits at a single specified time during the year or lose the opportunity to do so for at least a year. In such an instance, the employee may exercise his right even though the specified enrollment time falls within the freeze period.

Q - Can the bank that's financing my home mortgage loan increase amounts paid as "points"?

A - Since the variation of points is principally a function of interest rate changes, points are not subject to the freeze. Nevertheless, in keeping with the spirit and intent of the President's wage-price freeze, the level of these points should be no higher than that during the base period.

Q - Are customers entitled to inspect a store's records of prices prevailing during the base period?

A - Sellers must maintain lists of ceiling prices and customers have a right to inspect the lists on an item-by-item basis. If a customer questions the accuracy of ceiling prices for goods or services, the seller is encouraged but not required to show the supporting records of transactions on which the ceiling prices are based.

Sellers must, however, provide all lists and supporting records to Federal employees responsible for investigating complaints.

You Don't Say . .

ODOR

incorrectly if you wish to use it to describe something sweet or pleasant.

ODOR is not strictly applied to a foul, unpleasant or offensive smell or scent. STENCH is correct for this meaning.

AROMA is more correctly used for an agreeable scent or smell such as from appetizing food, spices, etc.

ODORIFEROUS is interesting. It means having or giving off an odor -- especially a PLEASANT one.

W. Richards, 102 Is Oldest Social Security Beneficiary

Wallace Richards of Rockdale attained his 102nd birthday Thursday, October 28. He was born in Burleson County in 1869, and is the oldest social security beneficiary in the six-county area served by the Temple social security office, Jack Calvert, Temple district manager said today.

Robert M. Ball, Commissioner of Social Security, sent Richards another special birthday greeting, which was delivered by Calvert Thursday morning.

In looking back over his long life, Wallace Richards remembers when his family moved to a farm west of Rockdale 99 years ago. He also remembers when the railroad first came to Rockdale, but he doesn't remember what year this event occurred.

Since his 101st birthday, Richards says he has "slowly down a little", and says he "can't walk to town every day like I did last year". But he is still alert and interested in everything that is going on. Even today, Wallace Richards doesn't wear glasses, doesn't have false teeth, but does have a little difficulty hearing.

He spends most of his time eating, resting and rocking in his rocking chair, smoking his pipe, and taking naps.

Wallace Richards first applied for social security benefits in 1961 but was turned down because he hadn't worked long enough - one and one-half years - on social security jobs. Then, in 1966, he filed for and was covered under Medicare, which was available to everyone 65 years of age or over, even though they hadn't worked long enough on social security jobs to be eligible to a cash payment.

Later, in 1966, Congress passed a special provision for persons 72 years of age or older who were not eligible for regular social security payments and who were not eligible for any other federal or state pension or annuity. So, beginning in October 1966, Mr. and Mrs. Richards started getting these "special age 72" benefits.

These special benefits are paid from general revenues of the Treasury of the U.S. and not from the regular social security trust funds. Only persons who have worked enough on social security jobs can be paid cash benefits from these special trust funds. The funds come from the regular social security tax contributions paid by self-employed persons, and employees and their employers.

Wallace Richards married Jennie V. Shields in May 1954. She is 24 years younger than he is. He has six children living, all boys, and one deceased daughter. He has "so many grandchildren and great grandchildren that I can't remember how many of them there are".

Jack Calvert, Temple district manager, points out that personal and benefit information about social security beneficiaries is confidential, but Mr. and Mrs. Richards gave the social security office permission to tell their story in celebration of his 102nd birthday.

Caldwell Blanks Yoe In 7-0 Win

By Marilyn Hauk

For the first time in the last five years the Caldwell Hornets downed the Yoemen in a 7-0 overthrow.

The first quarter proved to be primarily a defensive game. The Hornets won the toss and received.

The only score of the game came when the Yoemen punted to Caldwell and the Hornets started a drive back from the Cameron 30-yard line. With 3 and 7 a pass came from Eugene Ayers to Gary Easter for a gain of 17 yards. On the Yoemen 2 Ayers ran for the score and the score stood 7-0 after the conversion was a success.

The Yoemen had the potential for several goodfield positions in the fourth quarter. The Yoemen received a punt and Lonnie Scott started a mad dash for Caldwell territory. After making it to the Yoe 20, the play was called back due to a clipping penalty.

On the next play the Yoemen started a drive from their own 20-yard line. After gaining steady yardage to the Yoe 48 the Yoemen found themselves four yards short of that needed for a first down.

In the remaining minutes of the game Will Turner made a frantic pass attempt to Jackie Chubb but the result was an incomplete.

This game makes the season record 4-4 for the Yoemen with a district season of 0-3.

If some sad-eyed Junior in High School comes knocking at your door selling magazine subscriptions or renewals don't be coldhearted. It's a fund raising project to give our dear seniors a Banquet and Prom. The Juniors had a contest to see who could sell the most subscriptions by last Friday. Winners were Kathy Matula, and Linda Perkins. Congratulations industrious saleswomen!

If you were anywhere near Bus No. 1 carrying band students Friday night you may have mistaken it for a zoo. Ask Margaret Zacijek and Sandra Cobb about their donkey imitations. (At least I hope it's imitations!)

Watch out! The members of the Sophomore Class are one by one receiving their driver's licenses. The roads may soon be unfit to drive upon.

Linda Hollas and David Hollas seemed to be nothing but smiles Friday afternoon. Medical report - It's a girl! They now have a baby sister to do what baby sisters always do. (2 a.m. feeding can't be that bad.)

The next two ballgames are home games. Even though district is out of the question the Yoemen need mass support at the games. Come and do your part.

Yoe-Yoe 8th Wins By 2 TD

Caldwell scored first early in the first quarter in a 18-6 loss to the Cameron eighth grade.

On the following kickoff Yoe-Yoe Frank Tena returned 80 yards making the score 6-6 after the PAT failed.

Later in the first quarter Robert Miller broke loose for a 55 yard touchdown. The PAT failed and the score was 12-6 in favor of the Yoe-Yoes.

In the third quarter Stanley Manners broke up the middle of the line for the Yoe-Yoes last score.

Outstanding defensive players were: Brian Cobb, Joe Smitherman, and Ronnie Bennet.

Outstanding offensive players were: Robert Miller, Dennis Hollas, Frank Tena, and Mike White.

The Yoe-Yoes play Elgin Thursday in Elgin and they are still undefeated in this season.

7th Grade Scores

Caldwell defeated the Cameron 7th grad Yoe-Yoes 22-0 Thursday night.

The 7th grade B-team downed the Rosebud-Lott-B team Tuesday, October 26.

turned it around.

"What doesn't he do well?"

"He's just a real sound football player," Doerr continued. "He can play any position in our eight-man front except rover. He has superior strength, adequate quickness and speed, and is a good pass defender."

As a testimony to his versatility, Braband started the fall as one of Texas' defensive tackles, and at 227 pounds he still is the heaviest player in the Texas defense.

"In some situations Randy actually becomes a nose-guard for us," Coach Doerr said. "He is so strong, you just don't get much at all running at him."

Braband popped into Texas' starting line-up last year after sitting out a year because of scholastic ineligibility. He was injured in the Rice game and returned to see action in the Cotton Bowl.

This year, he's calling defensive signals, and the Spring Woods High product is one of the pillars of the Texas defense which has been riddled by injuries and personnel moves resulting from injuries.

"Randy is so consistent," says Doerr. "He does not make very many bad plays, and he won't take a lazy step."

Braband got off to a questionable start this season, troubled by a back injury suffered during the summer.

He was hurt when he fell about two stories while doing construction work with his father. Doerr figures if Braband had a hurt back, the ground lost the battle.

Experts Preferred

Owner-occupants of single-family houses spent $8.6 billion for upkeep and maintenance in 1969, reports the U.S. Census Bureau. About 71 percent of projects costing $25 or more were done by contractors or hired workers.

Environmentally, timber products offer a winning combination: Wood is biodegradable when discarded; wood is renewable in the forest.

In this era of booming outdoors adventures, newspapers—weeklies as well as dailies—seek good photographs of their readers and their outstanding catches. Editors are just as anxious as the hunters or fishermen to see these pictures printed.

Unfortunately, a goodly number of such photos, often taken of truly outstanding fish or game, are rejected. In most instances rejection was due to the poor quality of the pictures.

Most newspapers prefer photos taken by their own staff photographers. But fishing and hunting are sports of unusual hours, to say the least, so staff photos are impractical. Outdoorsmen, proud of their trophy fish and game, usually have a buddy take a pix of them or have a commercial photographer do the job.

The buddy-snapped photo, rushed to the corner drug store, can be back in your hands in 24 to 36 hours. This is not enough time loss to kill the news value of the picture. Even so, the photo may still be rejected.

Usually the reason for rejection is the matter of a photo lacking contrast, being out of focus, or being taken from too great a distance.

If you have a buddy take the picture, keep the following points in mind:

1. Have him move in close so that you and your trophy fill the view finder on the camera. Too much background and extraneous scenery only detract.

2. Have him focus the camera sharply. If the camera is a fixed-focus model, step off a distance of about nine or 10 feet and you will be in reasonably good focus.

3. Avoid cluttered backgrounds. Preferably use a cloudy sky or water.

4. Trophy catches and kills usually come once in a lifetime. Treat the occasion as such by keeping in mind that film is expensive. To be sure, shoot up the whole roll of film at different exposures. Better still, make it two rolls . . . at different distances, with different exposures (both lens openings and shutter speeds).

Milano Jr. Highs Whip Buckholts

Milano's Jr. High kicked off to the Badgers Jr. High team October 25 on the Eagle field.

Milano outscored the Badgers 39-12.

Buckholts lost eighth-grader Joe Mendoza for Monday night when he sprained an ankle in the second half.

Danny Krall scored both touchdowns for the team on 35 and 30 yard runs in the second and fourth quarters. Both PAT attempts failed.

Milano's scoring began with 4:31 left in the first quarter. Number 80 caught a 10 yard pass for the first touchdown and number 35 caught the PAT pass.

Number 35 also scored twice on 3 and 25-yard runs. Number 55 for the Eagles caught one of the 2 attempted PAT passes.

Number 40 hit the endzone on 10 and 60-yard runs. Number 80 took the extra point pass.

Eagle number 10 accounted for the last touchdown with 2:59 on the clock in the final period by recovering a Badger fumble in the Milano endzone.

OGLESBY-BUCKHOLTS

The Badger Jr. High team will host the Oglesby Tigers Monday, November 1. The game will start at 7 p.m. and marks the third game for the junior high team.

BADGERETTES

The Buckholts Badgerettes will travel to Rockdale Tuesday night for girls basketball action. Rockdale's freshman team will play the Badgerette B-string at 6:00 p.m. The game immediately following will be between the Buckholts A-team and the Rockdale B-string.

CATFISH FARMING

Catfish farmers across the state are invited to participate in a workshop and fish harvesting demonstration at Katy on November 10, reports Dr. Sterling Johnson, Extension fish disease specialist. Discussions will center of diseases, water quality, pond construction, economics, feeding and nutrition, and marketing.
